WASHINGTON. D.C. – Speaking today on the House floor on healthcare, House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform Ranking Member Darrell Issa (R-CA) asked, "When will this body deal with the problem in many cases created by government in a way that the American people can have the confidence that in fact we view problems as something that gets solved…We still don't' get it, the crisis is hear in Washington. The crises are created in Washington and we must change to helping solve problems with the American people and not making everything a crisis to justify our pet projects."
